

I have XM satellite radio, I am also an AFTRA member and I am currently working in Major Market terrestrial radio. I think XM has every right to compete in the marketplace. If terrestrial radio is better it will prove it in the marketplace. I think the traffic report quality, especially the audio, on XM ch. 214 in D.C. is weak compared to some of the local stations. Therefore, there is no issue. Either terrestrial radio competes or it folds up and dies. That is the issue. tr
